Honda pilot maintenance codes a1

Honda vehicles are among the most reliable and well-built automobiles available today. With regular maintenance and service, your Honda will give you many miles of trouble-free driving. The Honda Service Professionals at DCH Academy Honda are here to help you properly care for your Honda to get the most out of it. All new Honda's are equipped with a Maintenance Minder, a system that alerts you when specific service and maintenance items should be performed based on your unique driving patterns. Each specific service is represented by a letter and number that can be cross-referenced in your vehicle's owner guide. The most common service code that you'll see displayed is "A1" service. What is A1 Service? The first digit of your Maintenance Minder service code is always a letter - either an "A" or a "B". An "A" signals that it is time for your engine's oil and oil filter to be changed. This is a basic necessity for all vehicles as engine oil wears thin and gets dirty over time, reducing lubricating effectiveness and exposing your engine's moving parts to excessive wear. Replacing your oil filter is also vital to keeping your engine's oil clean and effective as contaminants and combustion residue accumulate in the filter and must be removed periodically for optimal performance. The "1" is the code signaling its time for your tires to be rotated. Because of the physics of steering, your front tires experience greater wear than your rear tires. Tire rotation helps keep tire wear evenly distributed among all four tires by periodically moving the front tires to the rear. Performing a tire rotation with every oil change is a great way to prolong the life of your vehicle's tires and get maximum performance, longevity and safety from them. The Service team at DCH Academy Honda will inspect each tire for unusual wear or potential safety issues and alert you to any issues that require your attention. A1 is one of the most common codes our customers ask about. A1 means you need to have your vehicle's oil changed, rotate your tires, check the tire pressure, or have your tires replaced. These are very common routine maintenance items and are usually all completed during your routine oil changes. As part of this routine, we will check your tires for wear and make recommendations to you when they should be replaced. What Does the Honda A2 Service Code Mean? An A2 code is another common code that comes up when it's time to have your engine oil changed along with the cabin air filter, engine air filter, or air cleaner element. Reset your A1 Code at DCH Paramus Honda today! Quick A1 Service Honda maintenance codes are typically a combination of a letter and a number. Each represents a particular part of the vehicle that needs service. Here is what the A1 maintenance code means: A - Indicates that an oil change is required. If A becomes B, the oil filter also needs to be changed. 1 - A low number indicates the smaller elements on your vehicle will need care. 1 means the tires need to be rotated and inspected. Putting that together, A1 means your Honda is due for an oil change and a tire rotation. Honda vehicles feature this system to simplify routine maintenance.
